About this Disclaimer

We write about products that we honestly recommend to our readers. They are products that our bloggers are enthusiastic about regardless of whether or not we receive a commission for them. It can also be products that we have received for free to review and sometimes we even get paid for them. Kurlify contains affiliate links, we receive a commission for this when you purchase a product via these links. This will not cost you anything extra. We hope our recommendations help you on your Curly Girl Journey by saving you time and money. So, it is a win-win situation. Thanks for your support ❤️

Affiliate

Kurlify uses the services of Daisycon, Awin, Bol.com and Amazon to promote advertisers through performance based advertising. Performance based advertising is a fair form of advertising because an advertiser only pays for actual and measurable results. In order to perform this service, these parties use so-called affiliate cookies and matching data. With these cookies a match can be made between the transaction with the advertiser and this website. As a result, the partner knows that this website must receive a fee.

When registering this fee, this website will have access to basic, anonymous transaction data. This data may only be stored and/or edited by this website in order to promote the advertiser more effectively or to make statistical analyses. This website ensures that stored data is adequately protected and adheres to applicable privacy guidelines and legislation. We have stated this by accepting the General Publisher terms and conditions with the parties.

The use of affiliate cookies and the storage of anonymous transaction data does not endanger the privacy of the visitor to this website. According to the Dutch Telecommunications Act and the AVG/ GDPR, this does not require permission. With regard to data processing within the GDPR, we rely on the processing base of legitimate Interest. However, we must inform our visitors about the use.
